

Re: editors' lunches
Neil Benson to: Nick Fullagar

21/10/2010 14:22

History: This message has been replied to.

Nick - all looks good to me.

Neil

----- Original Message -----

From: Nick Fullagar

Sent: 21/10/2010 12:08 GDT

To: Neil Benson

Subject: editors' lunches

Neil,

Attached is the note I will discuss with Sly at my 1-2-1 on Monday.

Please delete, amend, rewrite at will.

Regards

Nick

[attachment "Editors' lunches.doc" deleted by Neil Benson/Dir/CW/MG_CW]

Nick Fullagar
Director of Corporate Communications
Trinity Mirror plc
One Canada Square
Canary Wharf
LONDON
E14 5AP

Tel: 020 7293 3622

Fax: 020 7293 2251

email: nick.fullagar@trinitymirror.com

Editors' lunches

Objective:

To bring together key decision makers, across politics and business, and our senior editors to give them the opportunity to debate issues affecting our customers and our industry.

Frequency:

Six times a year.

Key Targets:

David Cameron, PM. Ideally this would be set for May/June 2011 around the anniversary of his election. The effect of public sector cuts on our businesses in the NW, NE and Wales makes this a more important meeting than just a one year on discussion. The ideal plan would be to get agreement for the lunch and a set piece interview which we could syndicate across our titles.

Nick Clegg, Deputy PM. Nick proved to be an interesting guest in opposition and the arguments for Cameron apply to him.

Ed Milliband, Leader of Opposition. This would be the first meeting.

Jeremy Hunt, Culture Secretary.

Theresa May, Home Secretary and Minister of Women and Equality.

Eric Pickles, Local Government Minister.

Adam Crozier, Chief Executive of ITV. Discussions between ITV and PA and the IFNC/local TV debate make him an interesting candidate.

Sir Hugh Orde, President of ACPO (Association of Chief Police Officers) or Andrew Trotter, Chief Constable of British Transport Police and Chair of ACPO Media Advisory Group.

Keir Starmer, QC DPP.

Christopher Graham, Information Commissioner.

Sir Igor Judge, Lord Chief Justice.